Communication Skills Workshop

Teenagers underwent a training session to improve their communication skills. Communication is an extremely complex process. Quite often difficulties arise from the lack of certain communication skills, as well as from the lack of self-control. Teenagers learned to work in teams, better understand and listen to each other, and achieve a common goal.

"Bunker" Game

Children played various board games, one of which was "Bunker." The game enhances self-presentation and self-confidence, which are necessary skills for teenagers. During the game, children realised that competitors can also be partners, thus improving their ability to conduct business negotiations without making it personal.

Group Session with a Psychologist

Group sessions with a psychologist are always relevant for teenagers because they are accompanied by active and interesting tasks that help release anxiety and immerse in an atmosphere of trust and relaxation. This time, they worked on fears, searched for ways to overcome them, built their "defense," and accumulated internal resources.

SviTy kids at a Picnic

Teenagers gathered together on the weekend to enjoy a warm autumn day, recharge, and distract themselves from everyday life. During the meeting, they shared their feelings and emotions and flew a kite. While the children were enthusiastically engaged in their activities, the parents participated in a session with the psychologist, working on important aspects of parenting that may be relevant in their parenting journey.
